

Arkansas recreation spots continue to catch the eye of editors who select the material for national outdoor publications. The spring edition of Outdoor Boating, official organ of the Outdoor Boating Club of America, Chicago, carries a picture of Narrows lake. The photo is of the east bank looking south past Little Chimney Rock, with Big Chimney in the background.

The same publication also gives vacationers some information on Bull Shoals lake, newest and largest of the hydro-power projects. The magazine says of Bull Shoals: "The Corps of Engineers has prepared a map of the area — showing launching and docking facilities, among other things. Inquiries will be served by the Area Superintendent, Mountain Home Area Office, Corps of Engineers, Mountain Home, Ark."

Yesterday's Little Rock dispatch quoting former Governor Sid McMath as saying he will run against Senator John L. McClellan next year if assured of "a good segment of support" has no more significance than any other trial balloon sent up a full year ahead of Election day.

It's an old practice, of course, for a fellow who is debating with himself whether he ought to keep his name before the voting public. But it's doubtful whether this particular announcement has any practical bearing on next year's senatorial test. It was generally assumed in the 1952 gubernatorial campaign that McMath's main purpose in seeking a third term was to keep himself in a strategic position to run for McClellan's seat in the senate in 1954. The voters dismissed that idea in last summer's election.

Arkansas' senatorial picture is presently considered to be nicely balanced, with McClellan representing the conservative view and J. W. (Bill) Fulbright the liberal wing. This newspaper supported both men in their original campaigns and we see no reason to apologize for endorsing spokesmen of such conflicting views.

Nothing is more intolerant than the notion that the folks back home know all the world's answers and require every man they vote for to coincide with the local viewpoint. In all honesty your editor admits he doesn't know a small fraction of the answers required in dealing with national and world problems — nor do you, or you.

The American system of handling this situation is to put a couple of good men in the senatorial offices, even if their personal views conflict — and let the truth come out in the course of debate.

That's the editorial policy of this newspaper. That's why we supported McClellan and Fulbright, too, regardless how we may differ with them on occasional issues. Sometimes Bill Fulbright gets a little too "federalistic" to suit this writer, as witness his fight against the state governments on the Tidelands question — but you differ with your best friends on political questions sometimes, and the same thing will always happen sooner or later between an office-holder on the actual scene in Washington and the citizen back home.

Shirley's Folks Won't Be There

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Shirley Harmon, a lonely four-year-old, knows now why her mommy and daddy haven't visited her in the hospital here.

She asked why they hadn't sent gifts for her birthday Thursday.

That's when the attending surgeon told her that her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Ray Harmon of Decatur, Ind., and an infant sister were killed in the train-car crash that sent her here for delicate brain operations.

But Shirley has more books, dolls and other toys than she'll ever use. They flooded in from people in 33 states who read about Shirley wondering why she saw only strangers at the hospital.

Chaplain Paul W. Strickland of Missouri Baptist Hospital suggested that any future gifts be in the form of money for a trust fund her uncle and guardian, William Bell of Greenway, Ark., is setting up for her and a seven-year-old brother, Gerald.

Bell and his wife visited Shirley at the hospital yesterday. They will make a home for Shirley and her brother.

The accident occurred near Cypress, Ill., May 9.

TEXARKANA, Mo.—An 11-year-old boy, J. W. Williamson Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Williamson Sr., of near here, drowned in a small pond about three miles from here yesterday when he disappeared off a steep ledge while swimming.

Firemen recovered the body from about 10 feet of water an hour after the accident.

City Makes Last Payment on Parking Meters

Money matters took up a good part of last night's meeting of the Hope City Council but there was some good news — the final payment has been made on the city parking meters and all the money from now on belongs entirely to the city.

The last payment was two years and five months after purchase. The total cost was $29,172.30 and the city has collected $37,344.30 during that time. With its part of the money the city has purchased a dump truck, street flusher, haymower, repaired streets and walks downtown, hired extra help for meter officer and a maintenance man, purchased two scooters for the meter officer. Under the present setup the money derived from the meters has to be spent on city streets.

The city attorney was instructed to draw up an ordinance to pay Mrs. Claude Whitehurst $750 for a claim against the city. Mrs. Whitehurst's request for $8,193 for alleged personal injury resulting from an accident involving a city car was previously turned down.

In other matters the group agreed to give Tom Anderson approximately $195.72 for repairing the Legion hot roof at the airport which was damaged by hail and voted to pay relief firemen $100 per month.

The street department was instructed to build two asphalt tennis courts at the Negro City park and ordered to grade and gravel streets in the Negro Cemetery.

Following a discussion the group voted to appropriate $500 to build drives and concrete walls around the O'Neal sewer treatment plant.

Former State Workers Must Pay Back Fund

LITTLE ROCK, Mo.—Judgments totaling 450 were levied yesterday against five former state officials for using state employees at state expense to investigate validity of signatures on a referendum petition. All served during the administration of ex-Gov. McMath.

Circuit Judge Guy Amsler awarded the judgments after a hearing on a taxpayer's suit filed by W. D. Vanhorn of Malvern last July 10.

Vanhorn's suit, asking that $1,817 be returned to the state treasury, alleged the officials had hired persons to engage in work for which no state appropriations existed.

The suit contended the employees were used to check validity of petitions seeking a popular referendum on Act 242 of 1951, a McMath administration measure.

The Supreme Court upheld the petitions and the act. The measure would have permitted the state to make purchases up to a certain amount without taking competitive bids. It was defeated at the polls.

The defendants and judgments allowed by Amsler were: Carl Parker, former purchasing agent, $154; Dean R. Morley, former revenue commissioner, $83; George L. Callahan, Alcoholic Beverage Control director, $173; Elizabeth D. Hendry, Public Service Commission disbursing agent, $25, and Lee Roy Beasley, state comptroller, $13.

Monuments Are Erected to the Great War Lords But Real Heroes Are the Little People

By HAL BOYLE
LONDON, Mo.—Rain came down on London Town and showered a merry-faced elderly lady sitting, knitting patiently on the pavement of Trafalgar Square as she waited to see her queen.

As the queen herself is the symbol of empire, Mrs. Hugo Harper was the symbol of all the voiceless millions who have served the British crown in places high and low across the centuries.

21 More Taken Off Welfare Rolls

LITTLE ROCK, Mo.—State Welfare Commissioner A. J. Moss said yesterday that 21 persons have been cut from welfare rolls under a new employment program.

Moss and Employment Security Department Administrator Bayard Taylor said the 21 were given jobs after being screened under the department program for finding seasonal employment for those capable of working.

The program, now in effect in Pulaski County, will be extended to other counties, Moss said.

Cherry Against Capital Punishment

By LEON HATCH
LITTLE ROCK, Mo.—Gov. Francis Cherry said today that he did not believe in capital punishment. "That doesn't mean," the governor said, "that as long as I'm in office it's the law I won't enforce it. However, if I were in the Legislature and a bill was up to do away with capital punishment, I would vote for it."

Cherry made the comment in reply to a question during a news conference discussion on his visit yesterday to Tucker Prison Farm. He inspected the Farm's death house along with other prison facilities.

Cherry said he was impressed by operations of the prison farm under Supt. Lee Henslee.

Cherry previously had visited the Cummins Prison Farm. He was accompanied on his trip yesterday by members of the State Penitentiary Board and the Penal Institutions Committee of the Arkansas Legislative Council.

Cherry said the board would proceed immediately after July on a construction program authorized by the 1953 legislature looking toward replacement of existing wooden buildings at the prison farms by fireproof concrete block structures.

Army Worms Hit Many Sections

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., (UP)—Farmers, some of them shedding tears of frustration, fought a losing battle today against "fantastic" numbers of army worms stripping crops in three Indiana counties.

The invading worms were doing "damage beyond belief," said Jackson County Agricultural Agent Edward A. Ragsdale.

Daviess and Knox counties were also hard hit.

"Farmers are telephoning my office and coming in every hour," said Daviess County Agent Earl Kump, "some with tears in my eyes."

He said farmers attempting to kill off the voracious worms were losing ground, despite the fact that seven light planes were spraying insecticide on thousands of acres of farmlands in Daviess and Knox counties.

First World war, is now a lecturer in history at Cambridge University, and is studying for a Doctor of Philosophy Degree despite her years. She wore a blue Red Cross uniform and on the blouse gleamed a medal given her for her work as a volunteer nurse in the last war.

Sandwiched in a crowd of pavement squatters between a housewife from Devon and another housewife from Lincolnshire, who had brought along five young children, Mrs. Harper had no complaint because she had no seat for the coronation. Nor did she seem to mind sleeping on the pavement during her 33-hour wait to see the queen.

"I waited 21 hours in the rain to see her father crowned," she said, "and I waited 14 hours in the rain and snow to see his funeral cortege pass."

"These ceremonies are the center of our lives, the tokens of our empire and the continuity of 1,000 years."

Admits Support of Business on Tax Program

WASHINGTON, Mo.—Secretary of Treasury Humphrey acknowledged today he has sought support from business groups for President Eisenhower's tax program — and drew a prompt warning from Rep. Reed (R-N.Y.) against "lobbying."

The issue flared as Humphrey testified before the House Ways and Means Committee which Reed heads, urging a six-months extension of the excess profits tax on business, now due to expire June 30.

After Humphrey related conversations with business groups on the issue, Reed commented: "We just want to see that there is no lobbying going on in one way or the other on this proposition."

Then the committee chairman fished out a copy of the anti-lobbying law and inserted it in the record.

The law prohibits federal officials or departments from using federal funds to try to influence Congress, either directly or indirectly, on pending legislation — except in regular hearings or statements to Congress.

Confederate Memorial Day Observed Here

Confederate Memorial Day is observed by many Southern States on June 3, the birthday of Jefferson Davis, says Mrs. Ruth W. Cook, historian of the local UDC group.

Decorations or memorial day was started by a Georgia woman following the War Between the States. It was soon copied and on May 30 the Grand Army of the Republic issued a general order setting aside that day for the purpose of strewing flowers on the graves of soldiers and other exercises which local groups may direct.

Due to early blooming of flowers in the South, April 26 is set Thomas Boyd, J. R. Giles, Judge Day and some observe June 3, for decorating the graves of soldiers regardless of the side on which they fought.

Work on Fordyce Dam Near End

LITTLE ROCK, Mo.—The executive secretary of the Game and Fish Commission said yesterday that work on the Tri-County Reservoir Dam near Fordyce is expected to be completed this week.

The dam, which eventually will become a 600-acre lake, is at the junction of three counties — Calhoun, Cleveland and Dallas.

Secretary T. A. McAmis said fish will be stocked into the 378,000 dam in the fall to make it a public fishing area. McAmis said the project is a joint effort of the Commission and local interests.

North Koreans Storm Back as Fighting Rages

By FORREST EDWARDS

SEOUL, Mo.—Stubborn North Korean Reds, bayoneted from Allied main-line trenches in Eastern Korea early today, stormed back this afternoon and tangled with tough South Korean infantrymen in savage close-quarter combat.

The battle of Lake the Gook's Castle still raged. There was no information on the size of the Red attack force.

Fog, rain and haze slowed but did not halt the aerial war. Sabre jet fighters prowled the skies over North Korea without sighting a Communist MIG jet. Sabres flying as fighter-bombers hit Communist battlefront positions.

South Korean infantrymen counterattacked Red troops dug in on Lake's Castle at dusk Tuesday, with Allied tanks pouring shells into Communist positions ahead of the assault waves.

By dawn, after a full night of bitter close-quarter fighting, the last Red had been knocked off the hill, the Eighth Army said.

Reports No Safety From Atom Attack

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON, Mo.—An advisory committee of industrial and scientific leaders told the Defense Department today that "in the light of stern facts" there can be no safety against atomic attack for the U. S.

The committee, headed by M. J. Kelly, president of Bell Telephone Laboratories, was appointed last December to study the problems of defense of the North American continent against atomic attack.

In its summary, the committee commented that "the Soviet Union is militarily capable today of a surprise attack in the United States which could cause large loss of life and major property damage and possibly temporarily lessen the life and major property damage and possibly temporarily lessen the capability of the U. S. to support a major war effort."

On that ground the committee argued for speedy development of "atomic offensive capability" as a deterrent.

Casualties in Korea 135,362

WASHINGTON (UP)—American battle casualties in Korea now total 135,362, an increase of 199 over last week's report, the Defense Department said today.

The casualties include, 24,163 dead, 98,322 wounded, 8,883 missing, 2,453 captured, and 1,541 previously missing but since returned to military control.

The weekly casualty report, which included those whose next of kin were notified through last Friday, showed an increase of 44 dead, 109 wounded, an 43 capture. The report showed a decrease of 52 in the number missing.

The report showed only an actual increase of 141, but this was because the Marine Corps, in checking their medical records found that 58 persons had erroneously been listed as wounded in the past.

At least for the city parking meters are a good deal and bring in an average of $454 weekly . . . enough to some day build a fully good streets in Hope if it's used for streets as a new existing city ordinance specifically states . . . but ordinances have a very strange way of being ignored by public officials when it's convenient . . . when the downtown streets were paved, and they really needed it, the city borrowed $18,000 at five per cent interest . . . even while paying for the meters the council paid $5,200 on the loan, leaving a balance of $12,800 and last night the group ordered the city treasurer to pay $1,000 monthly until the sum is paid out . . . those boys know that interest can really add up on a sum that large.

New Safety Act Has Unusual Features

LITTLE ROCK, Mo.—The Department of Revenues wishes to announce that Arkansas' Safety Responsibility Act will become effective June 11, 1953.

Because of the unusual features of the new law, the Department has decided to issue several press releases and to make spot radio announcements in order to acquaint the Arkansas motorists with these important features. This action is being taken because, under the law, a motorist's driving privileges and the registration certificates and license plates of all vehicles owned by him may be suspended for failure to comply with certain provisions of the Act.

President to Make Report to Nation Tonight

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON, Mo.—President Eisenhower makes his first television report to the people tonight, apparently to hear down on the idea that in such perilous times spending must come down, but not too much and taxes remain up.

Four Cabinet members will be on the program, too, taking their cues from the President and from big printed cards outside camera range.

The broadcast is scheduled for 8:30 p. m., Eastern Standard Time.

Reports were there might be some word on a new "goldfish bowl policy" of publicity for tax enforcement cases, perhaps to emphasize that the administration is trying to clean up what Eisenhower has called "the mess in Washington."

But there were no advance signs the half-hour TV show would produce any major announcements. The White House says the program is intended largely to tell the people what the administration has done, and why, in its first four months.

It is expected to touch also, in more informal over-the-cups fashion, some of the high spots of Eisenhower's radio address to the nation May 7. In that broadcast, he defended his military budget and called for temporary maintenance of present tax levels.

All four TV networks will carry the program. Along with the President, it will star Atty. Gen. Brownell, Secretary of Agriculture Benson, Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey and Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Hobby.

A test run yesterday ran seven minutes over time. That meant condensing or cutting out nearly a fourth of the half-hour program. Another rehearsal was set this morning.

Decisive Truce Conference Is Underway

of history. When every-thing seems changing all over the world, it is comforting to have a stable realm.

Why do you think these people are happy? At the bottom of it is the simple desire to show their loyalty and support for the crown."

A sound truck passed by then, blaring the tune "Oh, We Ain't Got a Barrel of Money," and the government-squatters stood up on their blanket seats and laughed. "I haven't," said one.

I was born on the high seas under the British flag, somewhere between India and Canada," continued Mrs. Harper. "Just where I don't remember—I was quite young at the time.

My father was a doctor, a parson and an army officer. I've lived in India, Bermuda, the West Indies, British Guiana and Canada. My father went to Canada to help the American Indians during an epidemic in 1914. He's up the Arctic somewhere now, treating the Eskimos.

I married and had three sons in three years, and then my husband was a mining officer, killed in France in 1918. I had two sons in the last war, and both were badly wounded.

"My third son?" — a pause, a slight breath, and then more swiftly — "he was killed by a bomb during a deppellin raid over Kent in 1918. There were 16 of us in the house at the time, and 14 killed."

A shadow from this long-ago pain darkened her bright blue eyes, and a shaking cloud dulle the surface of her face, and then the light of pride came into them.

"The only point in all this," she said firmly, "is that the more you know the more intense becomes your loyalty — the more you have suffered in the empire's cause, the more you believe in it."

She stood at the foot of the lowering monument to Lord Nelson, who won Britain's greatest naval victory at Trafalgar. And as I looked up at the statue of the famous sea hero he seemed no higher to me than the proud little lady waiting patiently on the pavement — Mrs. Harper, heart of the empire, loyal servant of the crown.

Profits Tax Solution Will Not Please

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — The excess profits tax poses one of the strongest dilemmas in American tax history. No solution — keeping it, softening it, or dropping it — will please everyone.

It's heartily disliked in Congress, probably by most members. Government tax experts frankly point out unfairness in it. And business men despise it.

The best argument in its favor is that it does bring the government revenue. About 2 1/2 billion dollars a year. There are two main arguments against it, and they go like this: It is unfair; it discourages business by draining profits.

Not because he liked it but because he said the revenue is needed, President Eisenhower asked Congress to extend the excess profits tax (EPT) until Dec. 31. Otherwise, it will end automatically June 30.

Congress, now considering his request, after the start of the Korean War raised individuals' income taxes and slapped EPT on corporations. Both kinds of taxes were meant to be anti-inflationary and to get money.

There is a good, but rarely mentioned, political reason for keeping EPT until Dec. 31. On that date the income tax on individuals automatically drops about 10 percent. Voters might resent it if corporations got a tax cut in June, six months ahead of them.

Score point from the beginning: What is an excess profit Congress answered: A firm's earnings in pre-Korean 1940-1949 must be taken as average or normal. A certain percentage of present earnings, above that average, is excessive.

EPT is in addition to the regular maximum 32 percent tax on corporations earning $25,000 or more a year. Congress aimed at a total, maximum tax of 70 percent on corporations — the 32 percent regular tax combined with EPT. Firms under $25,000 pay a flat 30 per cent, no EPT.

Some of the arguments against the tax:

Unfair — It's particularly unfair to small businesses which were just getting started in the 1949-1949 period, when their profits were understandably low, but which have now hit their stride.

Higher present earnings, although much higher than before Korea, may still be only normal for their industry. If those present earnings, or part of them, are treated as an excess over their 1949-1949 earnings.

Take another example: Two firms, perhaps in the same business, make the same product and are in competition. In 1946-1949 both were poorly managed, neither making the profits it could have made.

About the time of Korea the stockholders in one of these firms hired new managers. By drive and imagination, they expanded their firm, boosted its sales, increased its earnings. But it must pay a high EPT because its present earnings are so much above its pre-Korean average.

But the other firm, still having hired along, its present earnings not much above the pre-Korean days, hands out a smaller chunk of money, or none at all, in EPT. In short, the smarter firm is penalized for initiative.

EPT hurls expansion by draining off profits.

All firms are aware of the example just given. Many of them, therefore, know that the harder they work and the bigger their profits, the bigger the slice that will be taken by the government. This discourages some from trying to do better.

And many, since EPT will siphon off their earnings unless some of it is spent on company expenses, get in for extravaganzas that are not good business and are actually inflationary, such as big expense accounts, big parties, and so on.

There is another side to that coin, of course. Other companies plan for the time when EPT is ended by putting money into research and development.

In the pre-Korean days some companies suffered disaster, like fire, flood or strike, which kept their profits abnormally low or wiped them out. But their present earnings, although perhaps only normal, look extremely excessive when compared with the disaster period. They ask the government for relief.

Then by estimating just what their earnings would have been in the pre-Korean period if there had been no disaster. That's a costly

TAMPA, Fla., (AP) — Fifteen B-47 Stratojets, the world's fastest atomic bombers, streaked away from MacDill Air Force Base today on the first leg of a history-making mass flight to England.

This squadron of six jet planes, one of them piloted by the officer who was snapper on the first non-stop round the world flight in 1949, was to be followed by 15 more B-47s on each of the next two days. Actual time in the air on the 4,580 statute mile trip to be broken at Limestone, Mo., was scheduled as eight hours 59 minutes for an average of about 500 miles an hour. Top speed of the B-47 is more than 600 mph.

Taylor Says Koreans Will Obey Orders

By ROBERT UDICK

SEOUL, Korea (UP) — Lt. Gen Maxwell D. Taylor said today he did not believe the South Korean Army would break a United Nations negotiated truce and drive across the 38th parallel.

The United Nations ground forces commander told this correspondent in an interview that he regarded his South Korean soldiers as well-disciplined men.

"I know they will obey orders," Taylor said.

The South Korean government, in assailing the "final" U. N. proposal to be submitted to the Communists at Panmunjom tomorrow, have threatened to boycott the talks and achieve Korean unity by force, if necessary.

Taylor also emphasized:

1. Signing of an armistice would not justify withdrawal of U. N. troops from Korea before a political settlement is made.

"All this depends on the political agreement, but we must always stress the difference between an armistice and a political settlement. The words 'truce' and 'peace' sometimes are used indiscriminately.

2. The Armistice period will be a time for alertness.

"We can't go to sleep. We must be ready for the enemy to breach it. U. N. divisions will have to do their share. An armistice is an interruption in the fighting. It can be broken at the drop of a hat."

3. Recent stepped-up Communist military action is merely "muscle-flexing" exhibitionism designed to influence U. N. negotiators at Panmunjom.

"The enemy has his eye on Panmunjom. He wants to flex his muscles and beat his chest — show that there's life in the old corpse yet."

cess to date in influencing the course of legislation.

But the congressional lieutenants were not without their own tokens of victory.

State Can Get Gas at Discount

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Gasoline dealers in 11 counties yesterday entered 300 bids to sell gasoline and other service supplies to the state at discounts from two to more than four cents a gallon. Bids were being tabulated and contracts will be awarded later in the week. E. A. Walker, state purchasing agent said.

He said a Pine Bluff station offered a 3 1/2 cent discount and a Mt. Ida service station submitted a 4 1/2 cent discount.

The state expects to save about $30,000 a year or more under the new purchasing system, Walker said.

Congress to Accept Ike's Trade Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress appears on the way today toward accepting President Eisenhower's personally exercised leadership on Red China and reciprocal trade policies.

As the result of direct presidential intervention the Senate was ready to approve an appropriations bill rider limited to expressing the opinion that the Chinese Communists should not be admitted to the United Nations.

At the President's suggestion in a white House conference, congressional leaders substituted this yesterday for a sharp-toothed rider which would have cut off U. S. fund contributions for the U. N. if it admitted the Chinese Reds.

The President's hand was almost as clearly discernible in a compromise agreement reached by House leaders to push through legislation requested by the White House to extend the present reciprocal trade agreements program for one year.

House leaders bypassed controversial changes to which the President had objected and Chairman Millikin (R-Colo.) of the Senate Finance Committee promised speedy consideration in the Senate after the House clears the measure.

the two abrupt changes in course by congressional leaders marked Eisenhower's biggest suc

These Days
George E. Sokolsky
The Essence of the Problem

It took a man from Hollywood, Robert Rossen, to state a case concisely and sharply. In sworn testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities, he said:

"I don't think, after two years of thinking, that any one individual can even indulge himself in the luxury of individual morality or pit it against what I feel today very strongly is the security and safety of this nation."

"This is a government, a democracy, of laws and not of men; and the law says that this Congress or this committee of this Congress has a right to inquire into matters affecting the security of this United States of America."

"It's my duty and my right to appear here today, after much thinking, and give you whatever information I have."

ment. He merely stated that he was no longer a Communist, but he would go no further. However, he reached a point in his relations with his own country and with his conscience that left him no alternative but to straighten himself out.

Sometimes it is very tough for a man to tell all that he knows. Sometimes it is even harder for a man to give names of colleagues or to denounce what he himself did or what he did in common with others. Often it involves the deepest emotions, pride, personal loyalty, even generosity. Of this Rossen said in a colloquy:

"Mr. Tavenner. The committee may like to know why you have changed your mind about that."

"Mr. Rossen. Well, arriving at a decision like this takes a long time. I'd like to sort of compare it to arriving at a decision to leaving the Communist Party. That takes a long time. . . . To arrive at the decision which makes me come here today took me several years."

Rossen's testimony is the most integrated and the most informative of any that has come from the Hollywood group. This man has a philosophic mind and is capable of profound analysis. At one point, he pictures a young man who believed that his world had fallen apart:

" . . . I felt that I was looking for new horizons, a new kind of society, something I could believe in and become a part of, something in—well, in a sense I felt I wanted to attach myself to history; I wanted to be a part of that historical movement."

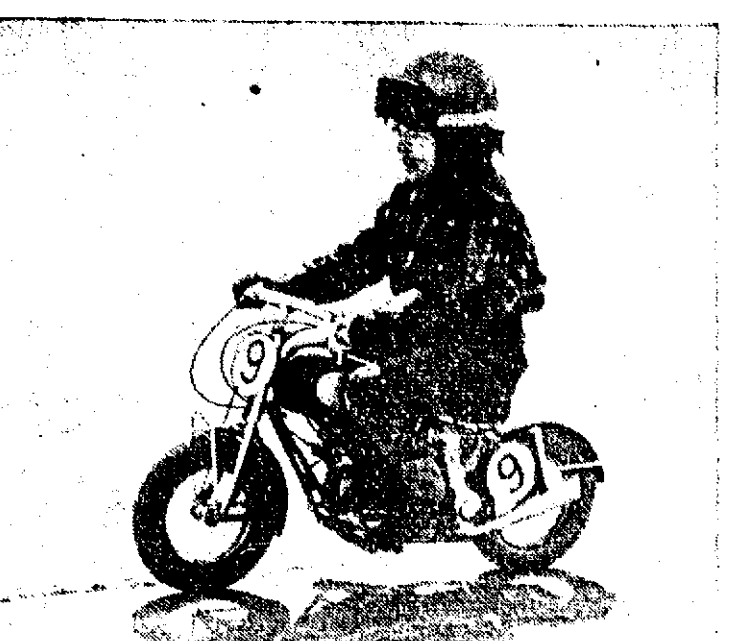

We all wonder why so many smart young men turned to this movement. Rossen was not merely asking for clearance. He was explaining—he was telling:

"Mr. Clardy. Isn't that one of the reasons why we are afflicted as we are today, because there is not that drive that should come from the inner man to lead us into religion?"

"Mr. Rossen. Well, I don't know. I think you can find it in many different ways, and certainly anything that tends toward the realization of the inner man, on any level . . . is a good thing; but certainly in the days that I can remember I think most of the intellectual life of the country was, in a sense, anti-religious, or atheist."

"Values had broken down. This is a real fact. There weren't any values, and the Communist Party seemed to be at a place that had the values. Its people were the most dedicated. It worked the hardest, and it was interested in cultural movements. It was interested in anything you were interested in. Therefore, you felt this was the only place you could possibly go."

This was so true in many countries after World War I. It was that turned Italian youth toward Mussolini and German youth toward Hitler. It appeared in China in the Students Movement and in Japan in the upsurge of nationalistic imperialism. Outh reaches for the stars and when the rational ideals seem to fade away, they seek unorthodox ideals. Youth can-

'Birth of a Nation' to Play in Hope
Back again to thrill a new generation is the museum piece of the motion picture industry, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," which will play at the Rialto Theater on June 10-11.

More than 20 million people have seen the biggest of all screen productions — boasting a cast of 18,000 and 2,000 horses. Millions more movie-goers, born since it was first exhibited in 1915, will have their first opportunity to see it in the new print, which has been re-issued with sound effects and a 100 piece symphonic orchestra recording of the original music score.

So effective is the new version it has been playing to capacity houses wherever it has been shown.

D. W. Griffith gained his fame as the immortal master of the film industry with "The Birth of a Nation." It has been unsurpassed in sweep and impact in the past 34 years.

The range includes Lincoln's assassination, Lee's surrender, the reconstruction problems of the South, siege of Atlanta, Sherman's march to the sea, antebellum balls and other historical scenes. Interwoven are two North-South love stories, which end happily.

Highlighted in the cast are such silent screen favorites as the late Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh and Ralph Lewis.

Adults are enjoying the film for the better understanding it gives them of everyday problems of the United States. Children see a historical segment of our nation significantly portrayed.

Wallace Walthall, brother of Henry B. Walthall, will appear in person on the stage of the Rialto Theater during the film's showing here.

Queen Busy With Personal Calls Today

By MILTON MARMOR

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth II, truly crowned "in the sight of all the people," turned today from the paths of pageantry to dingy Cockney streets and a round of personal calls on her adoring subjects.

Yesterday's exaltation, now consecrated in Britain's memory marked the beginning of six weeks of coronation journeys.

With her handsome husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, at her side, Elizabeth today started motoring through neighborhood byways for face-to-face chats with plain people.

First on her itinerary was London's northeast section, where she will arrive this afternoon past the homes of the poor and the humble, including the true Cockneys, those born within the sound of the bells of famous old Bow Church.

Tomorrow the royal couple visits Northwest London, with tours of other sections of the city Sunday and Monday.

The Queen presides at state banquets for distinguished coronation guests at Buckingham Palace tonight and tomorrow night.

Candidates in Italy Really Getting Hot

ROME, Italy — Candidates stumping for next week's Italian preliminary elections, criss-cross the peninsula with unflagging zeal today as the campaign reached its third from the last day.

After a brief pause Saturday to cool off and think it over — the law says campaigning must end 24 hours before voting — an estimated 30 million Italians will troop to the poll Sunday and Monday to vote on the issue of the road to a rising right or a power left.

The voters will elect 590 members of the Chamber of Deputies and 237 senators from a list of 7,416 candidates.

Palmiro Togliatti, chief of the biggest Communist party this side of the Iron Curtain, told a crowd in Naples estimates at 75,000 "The United States promised that with her help South Italy will become a new California. It is a lie. De Gasperi's policy aims only at war. We want no more orders from America to make cannons."

Pietro Nenni, head of the Red-supporting Socialists, said in Genoa:

"If the new relaxation in world tensions does not last, if a new crisis besets the world, Socialists will become the watchdogs of Italian neutrality."

The 72-year-old De Gasperi, one of the campaign's hardest work, made no formal speech yesterday.

DOROTHY DIX Career Change

Dear Miss Dix: After working for several years as buyer for a department store, I am now unemployed. I am 34, and would like a change of business. I have always been interested in people, especially children, and am a former teacher. With these qualifications, where could I go to get into the sort of work I want? I am willing to take additional training, if necessary.

Answer: You doubtless realize that, with very few exceptions, work in the field you mention does not pay nearly as well as merchandising does. It is, however, far more rewarding in other ways, and if you are prepared to sacrifice financial gain for service, you certainly deserve commendation.

There are so many fields to which you can put your talents, that the problem is more of selection than anything else.

Welfare Work
To name a few, there are the social service offices of large hospitals, any family welfare agency, the domestic or children's courts of your city, or the local welfare department. If your home surroundings permit, you might open your home to foster children. Providing love and temporary shelter for youngsters whose own homes have been broken through death, illness, or desertion is one of the finest things any woman can do. If you wish wider experience, you might work through the offices of the foster home agency, contacting possible homes for the children.

There is certainly no dearth of opportunity for you, and since most of this work is not too lucrative, and the qualifications high, I doubt if you will have difficulty finding an opening. I do hope you are successful in your quest, and that you will find happiness and satisfaction in the job you decide to take.

Dear Miss Dix: My boy friend says that at a dance or party I have no right to dance with anyone else. In fact, he says I should refuse if I am asked. On the other hand, he claims he has the right to ask any other girl to dance. Who is right?

Answer: Your friend certainly is rewriting rules to suit his own convenience — and ego. What does he expect you to do while he's dancing with another girl? Twiddle your thumbs on the sidelines? Let me warn you, lady, a man with a one-track mind like his had best be discarded right now.

For a direct answer to your question, the matter should be settled by a mutual agreement. Either both are privileged to dance with other partners, or you dance with each other exclusively.

Dear Miss Dix: I am in love with a boy in the Marines whom I date regularly. He tells me he loves me in fact, that's about all he ever talks about, but he says he is afraid of getting married. T. L.

Answer: If you haven't known the boy too long, perhaps you're bringing up the marriage question when he isn't really ready to discuss it. His reluctance upon "love" as a sole topic of conversation may be sincere, but more likely it would indicate a lack of knowledge on any other subject. I strongly advise you to get a boy friend with a wider range of conversation.

Dear Miss Dix: Last week the young man with whom I have been going since Christmas told me he had decided not to take me out any more. I am heartbroken. What can I do to get him back?

O. C.
Answer: When a young man tells a girl he is no longer interested in her, there's not much she can do, but accept the situation gracefully. In time, you'll find that it's not nearly the catastrophe it may seem now.

Arkansan Places Flag on Korean Hill

CENTRAL FRONT, Korea (UP) — A fearless Southern planter, the Confederate flag on a Communist-held hill today while his dandylike body fought off the Reds with rifles, machineguns and flame throwers.

Cpl. Donald (Ducky) Puccio of Crosscut, Ark., unfurled the flag in the face of the Communists during an early morning lull in the fighting. Then he and his buddies dodged burp guns and grenades in rushing to the top of the hill in one of the most dramatic actions since the Marines planted Old Glory on Mount Suribachi during World War II.

The attack began as a sergeant pitched a grenade at a Communist machinegun nest. From then on, all was not quiet on the central front.

Dulles Warns Near East Is Red Target

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Secretary of State Dulles returned from his survey trip to the Near East and South Asia declaring that this strategic area, like China, could fall victim to Communist domination.

"The situation calls for urgent action," Dulles said last night in a nationally broadcast and televised report on his 20,000-mile tour of the continent.

"We said we found the United States 'suspect' because of its alliances with France and Britain, countries suspected by some non-Communists of trying to restore their colonial interests. The Arabs, he said, harbor a 'deep resentment' against this country and are 'more fearful of (American) involvement in support of a Jewish state than of Communism.'"

Saying that the U. S. had given most of its postwar attention to the "very important, but not all-important" Western European area, Dulles observed, "It is high time that the U. S. government should give attention to the Near East and South Asia."

It came as a surprising shock to the 450 million Chinese people whom we had counted as a "friend" under Communist domination, he continued. "There are equally dangerous developments in the Near East and South Asia. The situation calls for urgent action."

Southern Pine Garden Club Has Annual Tea

The lovely home of Mrs. D. L. McRae, Jr., on Houston road was the scene of the Southern Pine Garden Club's Annual Pink Tea on Thursday afternoon, May 28.

The occasion honored the club's parent organization, The Rose Garden Club. Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Glenn Haire, who introduced them to Mrs. McRae, president of the club, Mrs. D. E. Bennis, first vice president, and Mrs. Joe P. Crane, second vice president.

Vantage points throughout the house held lovely arrangements of spring flowers. In the living room, the mantle was artistically decorated with beautiful pink mimosas, centered on a background of their own foliage. The coffee table was accented with pink rose buds and blue Queen Ann's lace, held in a blue antique china bowl.

The dining room was the focal point of the entire house. A large silver urn filled with pink hydrangeas together with silver candleabra holding pink candles glared the lovely buffet. The perfectly appointed dining table was covered with an antique lace cloth, and centered with two Majolica ewers, which held arrangements of pink stock, roses, and baby breath.

Officers and committee chairmen of the club assisted the hostesses in serving and in dispensing hospitality throughout the house. A dainty salad plate was served to the 100 guests who called between the hours of 3 and 5 p.m.

The hostesses assisting Mrs. McRae for the delightful occasion were: Mrs. D. K. Bennis, Mrs. D. A. DeLamar, Mrs. L. J. Harrell, Mrs. Frank Turberville, Mrs. Rucker Murry.

Coronation of Elizabeth as Queen of England Mightiest Pageant of Our Generation

By HAL BOYLE

LONDON, E. — Britain crowned the fairest queen in all her troubled history Tuesday and looked to her to lead one-fourth of the world to happier times.

The coronation of Elizabeth II was the mightiest pageant of our generation, and it was many other things.

It was the Middle Ages march of the Middle Ages, the 20th Century, an old way of life holding its own in a new way of life, the weaving of ancient threads into a fresh pattern.

It was a cry to God for guidance. A Cinderella tale is the moment of a lifetime for a 27-year-old mother dedicating all her years to reign but not to rule in the service of 60 million people.

It was a young queen humbly accepting her duty, and most of her subjects taking the day off to celebrate proudly in a land and time where few have had much to celebrate of late.

It was a fanfare of trumpets and waving banners in the wind, a sea of flags, a crash of many martial bands, the burst of guns signaling to a doubtful world that its most farflung empire is here to stay and intends to add more centuries to its story.

The trend of troops that have fought in distant climes and sailors who have looked up a lonely stars from faroff seas and thought of home, Tom Atkins and Jack Tar, always ready "to have another go at it."

It was an ocean of faces that were an inventory of the human race — black and white and yellow, old and young, turbaned and hatless, rich and poor, weeping and laughing and breaking their throats with cheers at a sight most — and perhaps all — might never see again — and deep pride and a yearning hope that this event might be the bright portal to peace and better days for all.

And over this vast turbulence of color and sound and emotion, this moving march of Britain's past into Britain's future, it was as though a rainbow had exploded, showering this heart of empire-greedy London's still war-battered streets where Shakespeare dreamed with millions upon millions of the flowers that England loves, and each child's hand in the massed throngs could get a petal.

The coronation was all these things, and it was more:

It was probably the greatest single family party the Commonwealth and empire has had in living memory, a tremendous revival of spirit and reunion of patriotism that gave all the same reason for dressing up — the queen, the classes, the masses.

It was an hour of solidarity for all. Many a peer in ermine rode to the coronation by subway, shoulder to shoulder with dockworkers wearing their worn best, and even brewery draft horses had their share of glory, pulling the added coaches in which sat the high lords of the realm.

It was a day of British justice and fair play. Some 30,000 British kids perched on the Victoria embankment to see the queen were allotted more space per person than the cramped person with lofty titles packed in Westminster Abbey, and even the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, who arranged the whole coronation, had to walk or hire a back home after the crowning. Tradition gave him no place in the procession afterward, but the blind and the maimed had places of honor, both in the Abbey and along the route.

It was a day of fainting and sore-footed enjoyment for many who waited for hours and walked for miles just to wave the Union Jack and get a momentary glimpse of their queen of her gown. Some Herberts were canny enough to tent out in Hyde Park the night before with the old lady and the kids.

It was a day when workmen quaffed their beer on rooftops, and Mayfair fops sipper champagne as they watched the great procession from exclusive clubrooms. One great chemical firm gave its 100,000 employees a pound $2.80 each to drink the queen's health.

Yes, it has many things — this coronation.

It began with a low-voiced prayer and went on to a loud and long parade. It was a holiday, a hope, a great outpouring of sentiment from the people, of all the sons of man, who are most reluctant to show sentiment.

They called it "the great day". The cockneys said, "Well, boggle my eyeballs", and even the retired stuffy colonels gave as their verdict, "Good show," a form they usually reserve for the winning of a war.

And the coronation was one thing more. It bore a "made in Britain" label, and was certainly the finest postwar product yet turned out here, for consumption both at home and abroad, to show that the British Commonwealth is still doing "business as usual," and will for a long time to come. It was something to see.
